

I know to have a double major of iDS and Computer Science sounds crazy, but this is my plan, because I am passionate about one thing, and that is the game design. I keep asking myself one question, who are you? Well, I am a game designer. For the past summer, I took two game design courses, GAME220 for character design, and GAME250 for game programming. Working hard enough, I got A's for both of them. But this is just the beginning. What's more, I have strong interests with Virtual Reality and Argumented Reality development. For further learning, I just bought the Oculus Rift Development kits, which is of great fun to play with. The Hololens from Microsoft is about to release, if the price is okay, I think I will get one. Ten minutes is very long time, what else? Recently, I am passionate with refreshing the contributions on github, so I will try to record all the notes, sketches, and codes of course on github.
